Cities for Global Health

Collective responses to global health emergencies

SHARE AN INITIATIVE

The global crisis generated by the COVID-19 outbreak is pushing cities of all shapes to give immediate answers to an emergency that is seriously threatening not only citizens' health, but the social cohesion, the economy and the infrastructures of our territories.

Collaboration between administrations of different levels is key to deal with this crisis. Seeking to foster collective responses and facilitate the access of decision-makers to first-hand experiences about how urban areas across the globe can deal with situations

UCLG World Health Organization Web-Site

Uploading Jeju's Exemplary Cases in responding to COVID-19

While the virus spreads regardless of administrative boundaries, territorial scales or socio-economic conditions, and the millions of people are daily dying in ways, it drives us to overcome management barriers. In metropolitan spaces, the collaboration of administrations and communities, and the coordination in metropolitan governance, can make a huge difference to ensure that each of us is not further threatened under scenarios of fragility and that no one is left behind.

alike, local and regional governments of all sizes from across the globe are invited to share their experiences and initiatives (e.g. plans, strategies, policies) designed specifically as a reaction to the COVID-19 crisis. Initiatives designed to face other health emergencies such as sanitary crisis or epidemics
